In their first collaboration, Scotto and May have come together to exhibit some of their most recent works of art, all of which investigate our experience of colour through photography and painting. Both artists make use of vivid shapes, bright hues and sharp geometry to draw us into the deeper themes of their works. Mario Scotto's photographs are inspired by his unique perceptions of the ordinary urban landscape, and Sebastian May reflects on recent social progress made in environmental and wildlife protection.

Mario Scotto exhibits a series of eye catching photographs capturing the unexpected beauty of the ordinary. His passion for colour and his eye for quirky details inform each piece as he makes art from the mundane and the overlooked. See more of his works on www.flickr.com/photos/62412002@NO6/

Sebastian May showcases a series of mixed media works and paintings in an exploration of society's relationship with nature, in particular with our continual conflict with the immediate environment that surrounds us. His collection resembles a visual call for action, as he uses irony and humour to question our progress in environmental and wildlife protection. <http://www.smayart.com>
